4 レベル

初級者から上級者までを対象とした4つのレベルで構成されており、英語の速読力を段階的に養うことができます。各レベルの読解文は、学習者の習熟度に応じた語彙や文法で書かれているため、難解な表現に悩まされることなく、スムーズに読み進めることが可能です。

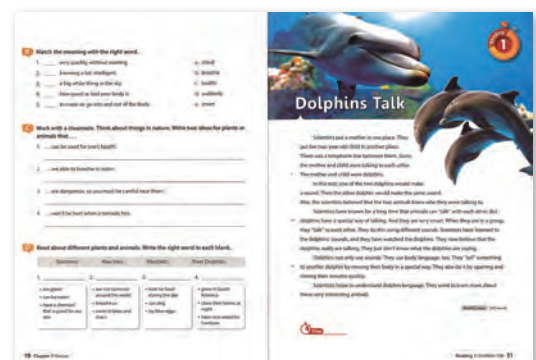

最終的には、英語の長文を速く、かつ正確に読む力を身につけることを目指しています。教材の巻末には、読解スピードを記録できるチャートが付属しており、時間を計って学習することで、英語の長文読解問題に必要なスキルを効率よく鍛えることができます。学習者は自分の成長を実感しながら、自然と速読力を高めていくことができます。

各ユニットは簡潔で使いやすい構成となっており、授業の冒頭15分間など、限られた時間の中でも効果的に活用できるよう工夫されています。

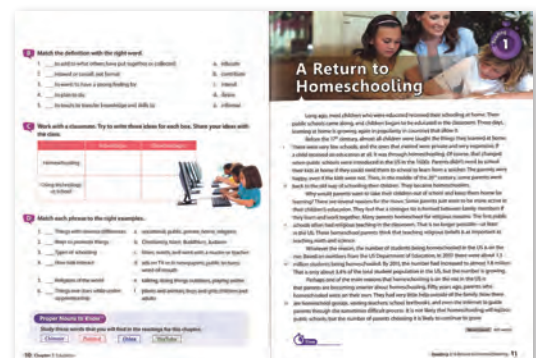

Each level features reading passages written with vocabulary and grammar appropriate to the learners' proficiency, allowing them to read smoothly without being overwhelmed by complex expressions.

The goal is to help students develop the ability to read long English texts quickly and accurately. At the end of the book, a reading speed chart is included, enabling learners to track their progress and practice timed reading—an effective way to build the skills needed for tackling long reading passages. With repeated practice, learners can naturally improve their reading fluency while gaining confidence in their growth.

Each unit is designed to be concise and easy to use, making it ideal for short sessions such as the first 15 minutes of class.

What Should Every EFL Teacher Know? 2nd Edition

What Should Every EFL Teacher Know? は外国語として英語を教える教師はもちろん、英語教師を目指している方のための本です。リスニング、スピーキング、リーディング、ライティングの教授法など実践的な問題に焦点を当てています。授業計画の立て方/やる気のない生徒にどう教えるか等、先生方が日ごろ直面する問題とその対策を紹介しています。

What Should Every EFL Teacher Know? is a must-have book which covers the most important information that a teacher of English as a foreign language should know. It focuses on practical issues such as how to teach listening, speaking, reading, and writing; how to teach pronunciation, spelling, grammar, vocabulary, and discourse; how to design lessons and courses; and how to solve teaching problems like large classes, a wide range of proficiency in a class, unmotivated students, and misbehaving students.

Chapter 1 What Should an English Teacher Do?

Main Idea

The main idea in this chapter is that the most important part of the teacher's job is to plan, and then planning involves applying the principles of the four strands. According to this principle, a well-planned lesson has four strands: reading, writing, listening, and speaking. Each strand has its own set of activities and strategies. Each strand should be given enough time to be effective. A lesson should be designed so that the four strands are given equal time.

This book is written for teachers of English as a foreign language (EFL). It is not written for teachers of English as a second language (ESL). Teaching English as a foreign language means that the foreign language, English, is not widely used in the particular country or countries of the classroom. This teaching situation determines the major characteristics of EFL.

1. The classroom activities may be the only significant source of input and language use for the learners. The teacher therefore has to play a strong role in the organization of learning.

2. Often, there is no clear learning goal. English is learned because it is important, but not because the learners immediately need it for communication. There may be extraneous needs, but these are usually not communicative needs.

3. The language is typically studied as a compulsory subject. In motivation and achievement may be low. Because of this, materials designed for ESL learners may not be suitable for EFL learners. EFL learners may have a higher level of proficiency than ESL learners, but they are not so motivated and difficult for EFL learners.

The English teacher has four main jobs. The first job is to plan and to teach. The second job is to manage the classroom. The third job is to assess the learners. The fourth job is to motivate the learners.

An English teacher has four main jobs. The first job is to plan and to teach. The second job is to manage the classroom. The third job is to assess the learners. The fourth job is to motivate the learners. Each job has its own set of activities and strategies. Each job should be given enough time to be effective. A lesson should be designed so that the four jobs are given equal time.

Chapter 13 Using a Coursebook

Main Idea

The main idea in this chapter is that there are important opportunities for learning that are often missed in a coursebook. The teacher should be aware of these opportunities and should try to make the most of them. This involves using the coursebook in a way that is not strictly linear. The teacher should be able to skip ahead or go back to previous pages as needed. The teacher should also be able to use the coursebook in a way that is not strictly linear. The teacher should be able to skip ahead or go back to previous pages as needed.

A list of English teaching is there using a set coursebook that is clearly defined. There are several positive features in this. The teacher has very limited responsibilities. The main one being to deal with the material in the book in the most engaging way. The teacher does not need to be highly trained. The learners have a clear idea of their progress, as they move through the book. The learners have a clear idea of their progress, as they move through the book. The learners have a clear idea of their progress, as they move through the book.

There are negative features however. Coursebooks cannot possibly contain all the material needed for a well-balanced course, and they often contain all the material needed for a well-balanced course, and they often contain all the material needed for a well-balanced course.

In this chapter, we will look at what is important in language courses but which cannot fit into a single coursebook. We will look at what can be done to make the most of the opportunities that are often missed in a coursebook. We will look at what can be done to make the most of the opportunities that are often missed in a coursebook.

What Can't Be Fitted into Coursebooks?

The principle of the four strands says that a well-balanced language course should include the four equal strands of meaning-focused input, meaning-focused output, meaning-focused listening, and meaning-focused reading. This is a good principle, but it is not always followed. Many coursebooks are designed to be used in a way that is not strictly linear. The teacher should be able to skip ahead or go back to previous pages as needed.

One of the implications of the four strands is that meaning-focused language use should make up three-quarters of the course time. Meaning-focused input, meaning-focused output, meaning-focused listening, and meaning-focused reading should each make up one-quarter of the course time. This is a good principle, but it is not always followed. Many coursebooks are designed to be used in a way that is not strictly linear.

When we analyze coursebooks by assigning the activities in the book to each of the strands, we typically find that about half of the material in the book is meaning-focused input, meaning-focused output, meaning-focused listening, and meaning-focused reading. This is a good principle, but it is not always followed. Many coursebooks are designed to be used in a way that is not strictly linear.

A large amount of the material which is not in a coursebook but which is still in the coursebook could not be used for a well-balanced course. This is a good principle, but it is not always followed. Many coursebooks are designed to be used in a way that is not strictly linear.
